Welcome to Bar Le Croco Bleu, located in the former historic Bötzwow brewery, which brewed the city's first beer back in 1885. The name of the bar comes from a bizarre episode in the brewery's history. Scholl was told that two crocodiles from the Berlin Zoo had been kept in a pool in the Bötzwow cellars for safekeeping during the war. So let's start the evening with an appropriately exotic cocktail!

Saturday, 7 November 2015

There is no fixed Saturday program - as at Meet&Greet events we always leave it up to participants to explore the city - but we have an interesting proposal for you:

P98a – From font type to printed poster!

Letterpress shop is a working space created by the world-known German type designer Erik Spiekermann. A “font-addict” who says of himself: “I have been suffering from Typomania all my life, a sickness that is incurable but not lethal.” Two of his typefaces, FF Meta and ITC Officina, are considered to be modern classics. Learn more about Erik: www.spiekermann.com

At the Letterpress Studio it is possible to experiment with printing on new fonts on old letterpress machines. Visitors can learn about the studio’s philosophy of the studio and print techniques. Letterpress also offers workshops where people can learn about the manual printing process, the individual font designs and the printed product.
